THE MINISTERS

These were they who stood with the saints,
Three-quarters of their century gone:
They were faithful,
Proclaiming what Isaiah did,
Preaching what Jesus did,
Preached Him most of all
With their lives as well as words.
No more need for them than this:
They were baptized, they baptized;
Married lovers, buried the dead,
Ministered to sick, abed and walking;
They paid a price for what they were, and whose,
Gave more, sometimes,
Than they had to give.
As you muse on them,
As you must do,
Poring on faces, names, and records,
Study, too, the light within them,
Reflected by their burdens gladly borne,
Laid there by Christ.

FOREWORD

There is something special about the West Virginia Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church. Tracing its history into the frontier days of the eighteenth century, it has brought together the diverse strains of the Wesleyan tradition into the Church of the twentieth century.

It has known the agony of division and separation. Families were divided and friendships were broken in the conflicts that tore the church apart. But love and faith have a will to win and relationships that were broken have been restored, little by little, piece by piece.

The three major branches of Methodism—Methodist Protestant, Methodist Episcopal, and Methodist Episcopal, South—were reunited in 1939 when The Methodist Church was born. It was only seven years later that the United Brethren Church in Christ joined with the Evangelical Church to form the Evangelical United Brethren Church. In 1968, these two denominations joined hands in the formation of The United Methodist Church.

Such a summary review does not do justice to the memories of John Wesley and Francis Asbury, to Philip Otterbein and Martin Boehm, to Jacob Albright and George Miller. From early and heroic beginnings there has run "an endless line of splendor." The Church in West Virginia today is in debt to a triumphant past; it is committed to an effective ministry in the present; it holds promise of a transforming ministry into the future.

In a very real sense the ministry of the Church has been derived from the ministry of Christ. It is bestowed upon and required of the entire church. We are all called to ministry. It is a ministry of the people of God within the community of faith and unto the entire world.

Within the people of God there are those who are called to a specialized ministry. We call it the ministry of the ordained, and those who respond to the call are set apart of the Church and authorized to conduct a ministry of Word, Sacrament, and Order.

In The United Methodist Church there is something very special about the relationship of those who are ordained for ministry. It is a covenant relationship and it finds expression in Annual Conference membership.

The ordained minister does not hold membership in a local congregation. Membership is held in the annual conference. Here standards for ministry are determined and each person is admitted only after a careful assessment has been made of "the gifts and graces" of the candidate. Here each person accepts a share of responsibility for every other. All persons together provide a system of support which allows us to say: "There is no other relationship among persons to compare with the covenant of ministry!"

It is something of a modern day miracle that as persons come and go, the dynamic of ministry remains. It supports and upholds each person as new friendships are made and old relationships grow in maturity.

It was more than a decade ago that an effort was made to identify in "Methodist Ministers of the West Virginia Conference 1964" the persons who were in ministry within the conference. Today a new publication, authorized by the Annual Conference, places in your hands the biographical information with reference to the present conference membership.

This volume will be a reference book for each one of us. But it can be more. Let it be your introduction to other persons with whom you share a covenant in ministry. Let it be a guide as we hold one another in our prayers. Let it be a source of support as we share one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ.

We are indebted to Frank L. Shaffer, Jr., who has served as editor for this publication. He has been persistent in his requests for information. He has been exacting in his standards of excellence. He has been faithful in a tedious task. He has demonstrated the attributes without which the book never would have been published.

And now on to the text. It is an exciting cast!

THE MINISTERS

These were they who stood with the saints,
Three-quarters of their century gone:
They were faithful,
Proclaiming what Isaiah did,
Preaching what Jesus did,
Preached Him most of all
With their lives as well as words.
No more need for them than this:
They were baptized, they baptized;
Married lovers, buried the dead,
Ministered to sick, abed and walking;
They paid a price for what they were, and whose,
Gave more, sometimes,
Than they had to give.
As you muse on them,
As you must do,
Poring on faces, names, and records,
Study, too, the light within them,
Reflected by their burdens gladly borne,
Laid there by Christ.

FOREWORD

There is something special about the West Virginia Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church. Tracing its history into the frontier days of the eighteenth century, it has brought together the diverse strains of the Wesleyan tradition into the Church of the twentieth century.

It has known the agony of division and separation. Families were divided and friendships were broken in the conflicts that tore the church apart. But love and faith have a will to win and relationships that were broken have been restored, little by little, piece by piece.

The three major branches of Methodism—Methodist Protestant, Methodist Episcopal, and Methodist Episcopal, South—were reunited in 1939 when The Methodist Church was born. It was only seven years later that the United Brethren Church in Christ joined with the Evangelical Church to form the Evangelical United Brethren Church. In 1968, these two denominations joined hands in the formation of The United Methodist Church.

Such a summary review does not do justice to the memories of John Wesley and Francis Asbury, to Philip Otterbein and Martin Boehm, to Jacob Albright and George Miller. From early and heroic beginnings there has run "an endless line of splendor." The Church in West Virginia today is in debt to a triumphant past; it is committed to an effective ministry in the present; it holds promise of a transforming ministry into the future.

In a very real sense the ministry of the Church has been derived from the ministry of Christ. It is bestowed upon and required of the entire church. We are all called to ministry. It is a ministry of the people of God within the community of faith and unto the entire world.

Within the people of God there are those who are called to a specialized ministry. We call it the ministry of the ordained, and those who respond to the call are set apart of the Church and authorized to conduct a ministry of Word, Sacrament, and Order.

In The United Methodist Church there is something very special about the relationship of those who are ordained for ministry. It is a covenant relationship and it finds expression in Annual Conference membership.

The ordained minister does not hold membership in a local congregation. Membership is held in the annual conference. Here standards for ministry are determined and each person is admitted only after a careful assessment has been made of "the gifts and graces" of the candidate. Here each person accepts a share of responsibility for every other. All persons together provide a system of support which allows us to say: "There is no other relationship among persons to compare with the covenant of ministry!"

It is something of a modern day miracle that as persons come and go, the dynamic of ministry remains. It supports and upholds each person as new friendships are made and old relationships grow in maturity.

It was more than a decade ago that an effort was made to identify in "Methodist Ministers of the West Virginia Conference 1964" the persons who were in ministry within the conference. Today a new publication, authorized by the Annual Conference, places in your hands the biographical information with reference to the present conference membership.

This volume will be a reference book for each one of us. But it can be more. Let it be your introduction to other persons with whom you share a covenant in ministry. Let it be a guide as we hold one another in our prayers. Let it be a source of support as we share one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ.

We are indebted to Frank L. Shaffer, Jr., who has served as editor for this publication. He has been persistent in his requests for information. He has been exacting in his standards of excellence. He has been faithful in a tedious task. He has demonstrated the attributes without which the book never would have been published.

And now on to the text. It is an exciting cast!

Note on Brevity

In presenting biographical material for over 700 ministers of the W. Va. Conference of The United Methodist Church, it was necessary to condense information as much as possible. For example, the "19" has been omitted from all dates.

No attempt has been made to identify ministers by former denominational relationships, unless these have been clearly specified in their own biographical material. Therefore, only a few designations identifying persons as "Former E.U.B.", "Former Methodist", or "Member of the Washington Conference" have been used.

The many years covered by this volume have seen a number of changes in both conference and district lines. It would be impossible to be perfectly consistent in these identifications, except to make them as accurate as they can be, and to be faithful to the material as submitted.

The following district abbreviations have been used in the interest of conserving space:

| | | | |
|----|------------|----|------------|
| Be | Beckley | H | Huntington |
| Bl | Bluefield | L | Lewisburg |
| Bu | Buckhannon | M | Moorefield |
| Ce | Central | R | Romney |
| Ch | Charleston | We | Weston |
| E | Elkins | Wh | Wheeling |
| F | Fairmont | | |
